

The Elkhorn Advocate.

VOL. 2.

ELKHORN, MAN., THURSDAY, FEB. 22, 1894.

NO. 11

CHURCH DIRECTORY.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND—Divine Services will be held D. V. in St. Mark's Church, Elkhorn, every Sunday during the winter months at the hours of 11 o'clock A.M. and 7:30 o'clock p.m. Sunday School in the Church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Church of Advent. Hobson Services at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. R. G. STEVENSON, Curate in charge.

PHYSYTHEAN CHURCH—Sabbath Services morning and evening at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Y. P. & C. E. on Friday evening at 7:30 in Broadley's Hall. Service at 10 a.m. at 3 o'clock p.m. W. G. W. FORTUNE, Pastor.

METHODIST CHURCH—11 a.m.—School 11 a.m.—Smith's at 2:30 p.m. Elkhorn, 7:30 p.m. Feb. 25—Elkhorn, 11 a.m. The Hall, 3 p.m. E. L. C. E. every Monday 7:30 p.m. T. M. TALBERT, Pastor.

Canadian Pacific Railway.
—TO—

Toronto, Montreal, New York and all points east.

—TO—
Vancouver, Victoria, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, and all.

PACIFIC COAST POINTS.

AUSTRALIA
FROM VANCOUVER

B. S. Warrimoo..... March 15

B. S. Arawa..... February 16

China and Japan
FROM VANCOUVER

Empress Japan..... Feb. 5

Empress China..... March 5

For full information, Apply to

C. F. TRAVIS, Agent, Elkhorn.

OB TO

ROBERT KEHR,

General Passenger Agent, Winnipeg.

—THE—EKKHORN BAKERY.

WHITE, BROWN
AND FANCY BREAD.

BUNS, CAKES, BISCUITS AND PASTRY.

Wedding Cakes—a Specialty

FRUIT AND OYSTERS IN SEASON

C. TRUMBELL

Elkhorn
Livery, Feed & Sale Stables

Ran in connection with the Cavanagh Hotel.

Where you get every attention, good rigs and careful drivers at lowest rates.

Commercial Trade a Specialty.

Town Dray

Always at hand.

Merchants and others having goods to handle can make satisfactory arrangements with the proprietor.

J. H. Cavanagh.

Special Offer

To those who wish to subscribe for the

ADVOCATE, we make the following liberal offer. We will take as subsciptions the following commodities at 10 per cent above highest market prices

Wheat Potatoes, Butter, Eggs, dressed

Turkey, Geese, Ducks, Chickens, Vegetables, Sos, Muffs, Worl, etc.

MUSIC.

ELKHORN STRING QUARTETTE

Engagements taken for Balls, Concerts, etc.

Terms moderate.

A. E. ASPINWALL, Manager

Barber Shop

—AND—

BILLIARDS.

HAIR CUTTING & SHAVING

Billiard and Pool Table.

CIGARS, ETC.

W. J. DIXON.

This is for You.

Although I have to close my place of business here, I still wish to have your patronage. If you place any repairs in the Watch or Jewelry line in the hands of G. H. Kruger of this place, he will forward to me at Moosomin, and I will return as soon as possible, guaranteeing satisfaction in every particular.

H. A. BURK,
Watchmaker & Jeweller,

Moosomin, Ass't.

W. J. TAGGART,

Carriage Builder.

—AND—

GENERAL BLACKSMITH

Horse Shoeing and Shear Work

A Specialty.

All Work Neatly and Promptly Handled by

STAND 1st door north Cavanagh's livery stable.

ELKHORN MAN.

FRAME & MILLER.

HAVE ALL KINDS OF

Lumber, Lath, and Shingles

FOR SALE.

ALSO DEALERS IN

Heavy & Shelf Hardware

Paints, Oils, Glass

Tinware.

STOVES Specialty at this SEASON.

SMITH'S HARD STOVE AND

SOFT COAL.

TERMS CASH OR ITS EQUIVALENT

NELSON ST. — VIRDEN

ARKEBEE'S

LIVERY, & FEED STABLES

RICHILL AVENUE — ELKHORN, MAN.

Published by the Webster India Press.

W. J. THOMSON, Editor.

THE ELKHORN ADVOCATE

Issued every Thursday afternoon from the office of publication, Broadley's Block, Elkhorn, Man.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1 Per Annum

Published by the Webster India Press.

W. J. THOMSON, Editor.

THE PATRONS.

The Patrons' platform is made up of twelve planks—some good and stout, and others that we would hardly feel safe in trusting.

The first one, namely, "Maintenance of British connexion," is one broad enough and safe enough for every loyal Canadian to stand on it. Frequently has been raised from time to time, for annexation, independence, imperial federation, and other fads, but we believe that the present order of things is acceptable to the majority of the people of Canada. While there are many evils connected with party government, it is at the same time the most successful plan that has yet been tried. While we may deplore the corruption that at times creeps in and disgraces individuals and governments, yet there is nothing better offered, and we must make the best of things as they exist. He who would pull down should be prepared to replace the structure by something better. We think our friends, the Patrons, have undertaken an impossible task when they attempt to steer clear of the old party lines. Almost every question discussed in parliament is made a party issue, and our representatives must attach themselves to one cause, or be sure they will be cast adrift.

It is objected that doctors and lawyers should not represent agricultural constituencies. A man's profession should not debar him if he has "ability, integrity and independence" (not the theory.)

Vague ideas exist as to what constitutes ability. A man may understand the needs of a constituency, and not be able to express his ideas clearly and forcibly.

Such a man can not command attention, and soon sinks to the level of a mere voting machine. If a voter has the necessary qualifications let him be brought to the front—but not merely because he is a farmer.

It is the fifth clause—tariff for raivene only—that the Reform party base their hope of gaining Patron votes; assuming that because the farmers advocate certain changes in the tariff that they will vote with the Opposition. On this question the Patrons are more nearly allied to the Conservative party than to the Reform.

The Patrons advocate tariff reform.

The government are at present, busity preparing a bill to reform the tariff.

The Patrons believe in maintaining the tariff. So do the Conservatives—the only difference of opinion being how much where duties shall be placed.

In dealing with the question the farmers must remember that it would be unfair if all the taxpayers were placed on the front line. If duties must be maintained, it is manifest that there should be a strict equality maintained. The individual must be willing to accept what is for the general good. The government at Ottawa have promised a revision of the tariff, and no doubt they will now deal fairly with the west, as they have in the past dealt fairly.

On the principle that "It takes a thief to catch a thief," we think the Patrons will need some strong law to represent them in the legislature. There is no such a thing as a good, what expense of time or labor each production

costs him. Amongst other things he states from the local farming more prevalent,

it was evidently the safest and most independent occupation, in existence, for any business conducted on the principle of the business principle.

He exposed the hazardous system of farming, as often the farmers always have to pay for their products, and the price of the products is always uncertain, and the farmer can not state, only at gross, what expense of time or labor each production

costs him. Amongst other things he

states from the local farming more prevalent,

it was evidently the safest and most

independent occupation, in existence, for

any business conducted on the principle of the business principle.

He urged the importance of more brain work, more planning and arrangement, and instead of conserving old methods, endeavor to adapt all new ones that were in any way superior. A discussion and a hearty vote of thanks followed. Mr. Geo. Freeman and Mr. Geo.

Broadley are appointed to read papers before the Institute at their next meeting.

School Meeting.

An informal meeting of the Elkhorn ratepayers was held in the Forster's Hall on Monday evening last, to consider if it was wise or unsafe to appoint a third teacher for the Elkhorn Public School.

About thirty people put in an appearance, and Mr. J. McLeal, postmaster, being elected chairman, Mr. J. Bradley, secy-treas of the board of trustees, was called upon to explain the object of the meeting.

Mr. Bradley stated that the present crowded condition of the school rendered it impossible for justice to be done, and a change of some kind was absolutely necessary;

and the object of the meeting was to discuss the best means to be adopted.

The school had considerably increased, and the town had developed considerably in the children line, the time was near when considerably more educational econ-omization would be required, and a year ago instead of spending $10,000, they ought to have spent twice the amount, and provide for twice the accommodation.

Mr. Fletcher was then requested to state the condition of the school and its requirements.

He stated that the accommodation at present afforded was entirely inadequate for the scholars in attendance, which, as he was informed, would eventually be augmented.

The total number on the roll was 50, with an average attendance of 17, and only sufficient accommodation for 17.

This limited accommodation made it necessary to crowd three into a seat, which were at the best small enough for two.

It was impossible to provide more accommodation by re-arranging the desks. His work was from 2nd class to Intermediate, and with five classes it was impossible to do the school justice, as he could only give fifty minutes per day to each class. There were 50 names on the register in Mr. Huston's department, with an average attendance of 30. The room would seat 40, and it was expected that 80 more would be attending in the spring.

Mr. Evans stated that he had placed the matter before Mr. Lang, school inspector, who advised in favor of an Intermediate school, and by putting a wing on the school building, a grant from the Legislature could be obtained.

Mr. Freeman said that the position of a rich and biring new teacher was all very well, but these things had to be paid for, and he thought the ratepayers had difficulty enough in paying the present staff.

Mr. Stevenson stated that an

$3,000 had already been spent in providing half an education for the children; it was supreme folly to neglect raising an other $200

A LIFE OF SACRIFICE.

The Glasgow "Scottish Reformer's" First Prize Story.

CHAPTER I.

Lead Thou me on.

HE short December afternoon was drawing to a close as a young girl hurriedly entered. The London express had just arrived, and, eagerly she scanned the few lines which the letter bore. She was on the point of running out when she noticed a figure, muffled in a long cloak and carrying a small Gladstone bag, coming towards her. Immediately she was forward. "Oh, Leslie! I'm so glad you're come. I was beginning to think— and she stopped.

"Takes what, dear?" queried Leslie. "That you my disappointed man."

"My, how could you? Does Mrs. Morton know we are coming?"

"Yes, Leslie; I told her." And the two walked on.

Mary Morton was the younger of the two daughters of a widow lady. Her husband, Mr. Morton, had practised as a lawyer in the lower town, and on his death left nothing enough to keep his wife and daughter in comfortable circumstances. Mary, however, was now supporting herself by working at a millinery shop in Edinburgh University as an M.D. Here she enjoyed an intimate friendship with Lillian Drysdale, a girl with whom she had been intimate friends, while Miss Lillian's brother Leslie, whom she has just met at Liverpool Station.

Lillian Drysdale was an orphan. His brother, fifteen years his senior, had made great wealth—a city merchant, and educated Leslie in the rudiments of the metropolis. He had just had his "final" with full honors, and had come to see her when one day he hoped to call again.

It was evening and Mary and Leslie were strolling on the sands.

"Can you bear the separation, dear?" he asked.

"I think so, Leslie," and sobbing, "God have mercy on you!"

"Amen! Oh, Mally! I have tried to hard to overcome the temptation, but it is a sin of that fatal wine I must have. It is a physician who it ravages on the system, and yet I cannot conquer that awful craving."

Away from my frail home companions—with Dr. Braham for my friend, I hope and trust him to be able to renounce forever and keep a distance from the demon of my soul. It pains me to leave you here, darling, but I dare not ask you yet to share the ill and home," and his voice died in a tremulous whisper, "it is a drunkard."

"Oh, Leslie! I was so happy in your love," she moaned. "May you get?"

"Mally," he said solemnly, "would you have me?"

"Oh no! No! Forgive me! I did not know what I was saying. But—"

"Mally! I think how painful it is for me to leave you! Oh, God! that is hardest of all."

But now, with a woman's instinct, she divined the keenness of his pain, and turned comforter.

"Leslie, dearest, you must go. My love for you and my love in my Father will sustain me over all difficulties; you your duties as physician, and I fear not for His sake, remember that God will not tempt a man above that he is able, but will, with the temptation, provide a means of escape."

"Mally, I will go. If you can be brave, shall I be a coward?" And he wept.

CHAPTER II.

"Remember not past years."

There was a knock and passed time. Leslie Drysdale called for Mrs. Morton. Mary Morton was in her lodgings in Edinburgh University, in her hand, and her face radiant. "Why! In the first place was she not Mrs. Mary Morton? Yes, her labors had had their reward, and now she was qualified to do her best in alleviating the sufferings of her fellow mortals. The joy of joys of Leslie's success had been too great for her to restrain.

The demon Drank had not entirely loosened his grip on that young soul; but he had been compelled to slacken it. The fight was sharp but unequal, and Right's victory in the end was complete. Mrs. Morton's health had been failing, and the dying brother, all forgetful of his woes, had watched with her. Now when she looked into that face she read the ravages of drink already begun. That flesh, that once was so fair, was now gaunt, the girl with a look of mingled tenderness and compassion. "You are beautiful! and yet a victim to drink. She must be saved at any cost, and—

"Mary, Mary, why don't you speak? I am bound to help me as we worked as I! Oh! I could not bear to see my father and I said, 'Why should she die?' Leslie and I said, 'Why should not I? And the evil spirit within me said, 'Why not?' And I succumbed to the temptation; now," she moaned, "what would I not do, if I got to ride myself of my craving for it?"

The first shock of surprise over, Mary Morton was herself again. She knelt beside her friend, and putting her arm round her shoulders said: "Lillian dear, I shall always be your friend, but remember there is no room in my heart to whom you must speak for aid. We will pray for His help, and conquer. Come! Be a woman, and a brave one, and we will fight the battle together."

Two months later a letter came from Barbadene, but not from Leslie. Dr.

Barbadene had passed time. Leslie Drysdale called for Mrs. Morton. Mary Morton was in her lodgings in Edinburgh University, in her hand, and her face radiant. "Why! In the first place was she not Mrs. Mary Morton? Yes, her labors had had their reward, and now she was qualified to do her best in alleviating the sufferings of her fellow mortals. The joy of joys of Leslie's success had been too great for her to restrain.

"I am Mrs. Morton. Will you take a seat, Mr. Drysdale?" she said.

"Scarcely worth while," with a sharp laugh. "I don't believe in circumstances, Mrs. Morton, and as no doubt you will be wondering what the object of my visit, I shall come to the point at once. I understand that there was a secret and mutual engagement between you and my brother Leslie, and—"

Mary Morton rises from her chair. She looks flushed and her eyes kindled as she replied with the dignity of a queen. "Sir, I am your brother's promised wife."

"Sir! The secret pleasure of having you as a sister-in-law," she answered. "Calm yourself, you must know all. Lillian was engaged to the son of a wealthy Scotch landlord; they were to be married in autumn. Leslie is dying of typhus contracted in some foreign port. His business is dying also. Leslie cannot come home, John in partnership, nor marry a wealthy woman, not a poor."

"You need not trouble troubling your existence, sir. In plain English, you want me to give him up. I should say, 'No,' he said, clutching a very lifelike hand her steady gaze.

"Look on his misery, and never let his face with her hands. He could see her slender form tremble under the weight of pain he had laid on her young shoulders, but the brood had entered his soul; he had no pity.

As fast she stood silent and faced him, but her voice was firm, as she replied: "I dare not consent from you that pain you have given me to-night! If Leslie has consented, or will consent, to your proposal, he assured I shall not stand in the way."

Then—Leslie does not. He is engaged to marry Miss Bingham, the daughter of a rich man, and he himself left the room.

What made Francis Drysdale add that to his insulting speech, he himself, could scarcely tell. But Mary Morton neither screamed nor fainted. She looked Leslie's letter in her desk, and sank down to take something but what? Then she played long and low, and even as the words "They will be done" trembled on her lips, morning broke, and she awoke from her know-a-saddened-woman.

It was Christmas Day, and the snow was falling silently, as the young girls knew by the hushes of a dying man.

"Will he talk again, Mary, do you think?"

"Hush! I see, he tries to talk," and very tenderly, her slender arms raised the new comer. "He is the boy I have seen. He is a good boy, but weak. Come, I will tell him about his poor younger brother, and by drink. He says he is a pulmonary invalid, but that drives his poor younger brother, and where the crimson flush on his face is pale, and even as the words "Let me die—in—your—arm—" The life blood flowed from his mouth, and stained her dress. Leslie Drysdale was dead.

In one of our West African Missions, a native medical missionary, and his friend, Mr. Edward H. Morton and Lillian Drysdale, had dined in the hall of the evening. They sat together, and when the dinner was over, the children, who had been an example of truth and purity—filled a drunkard's grave.

"Lillian! Mary! I love you, I said, he said. "I can forgive, but not forget. On God! driving him out, I said, "I can't do that."

"Mary, how could you? Does Mrs. Morton know we are coming?"

"Yes, Leslie; I told her." And the two walked on.

Mary Morton was the younger of the two daughters of a widow lady. Her husband, Mr. Morton, had practised as a lawyer in the lower town, and on his death left nothing enough to keep his wife and daughter in comfortable circumstances. Mary, however, was now supporting herself by working at a millinery shop in Edinburgh University as an M.D. Here she enjoyed an intimate friendship with Lillian Drysdale, a girl with whom she had been intimate friends, while Miss Lillian's brother Leslie, whom she has just met at Liverpool Station.

Lillian Drysdale was an orphan. His brother, fifteen years his senior, had made great wealth—a city merchant, and educated Leslie in the rudiments of the metropolis. He had just had his "final" with full honors, and had come to see her when one day he hoped to call again.

"Takes what, dear?" queried Leslie. "That you my disappointed man."

"My, how could you? Does Mrs. Morton know we are coming?"

"Yes, Leslie; I told her." And the two walked on.

It was evening and Mary and Leslie were strolling on the sands.

"Can you bear the separation, dear?" he asked.

"I think so, Leslie," and sobbing, "God have mercy on you!"

"Amen! Oh, Mally! I have tried to hard to overcome the temptation, but it is a sin of that fatal wine I must have. It is a physician who it ravages on the system, and yet I cannot conquer that awful craving."

Away from my frail home companions—with Dr. Braham for my friend, I hope and trust him to be able to renounce forever and keep a distance from the demon of my soul. It pains me to leave you here, darling, but I dare not ask you yet to share the ill and home," and his voice died in a tremulous whisper, "it is a drunkard."

"Oh, Leslie! I was so happy in your love," she moaned. "May you get?"

"Mally," he said solemnly, "would you have me?"

"Oh no! No! Forgive me! I did not know what I was saying. But—"

"Mally! I think how painful it is for me to leave you! Oh, God! that is hardest of all."

But now, with a woman's instinct, she divined the keenness of his pain, and turned comforter.

"Leslie, dearest, you must go. My love for you and my love in my Father will sustain me over all difficulties; you your duties as physician, and I fear not for His sake, remember that God will not tempt a man above that he is able, but will, with the temptation, provide a means of escape."

"Mally, I will go. If you can be brave, shall I be a coward?" And he wept.

CHAPTER III.

"Remember not past years."

There was a knock and passed time. Leslie Drysdale called for Mrs. Morton. Mary Morton was in her lodgings in Edinburgh University, in her hand, and her face radiant. "Why! In the first place was she not Mrs. Mary Morton? Yes, her labors had had their reward, and now she was qualified to do her best in alleviating the sufferings of her fellow mortals. The joy of joys of Leslie's success had been too great for her to restrain.

The demon Drank had not entirely loosened his grip on that young soul; but he had been compelled to slacken it. The fight was sharp but unequal, and Right's victory in the end was complete. Mrs. Morton's health had been failing, and the dying brother, all forgetful of his woes, had watched with her. Now when she looked into that face she read the ravages of drink already begun. That flesh, that once was so fair, was now gaunt, the girl with a look of mingled tenderness and compassion. "You are beautiful! and yet a victim to drink. She must be saved at any cost, and—

"Mary, Mary, why don't you speak? I am bound to help me as we worked as I! Oh! I could not bear to see my father and I said, 'Why should she die?' Leslie and I said, 'Why should not I? And the evil spirit within me said, 'Why not?' And I succumbed to the temptation; now," she moaned, "what would I not do, if I got to ride myself of my craving for it?"

The first shock of surprise over, Mary Morton was herself again. She knelt beside her friend, and putting her arm round her shoulders said: "Lillian dear, I shall always be your friend, but remember there is no room in my heart to whom you must speak for aid. We will pray for His help, and conquer. Come! Be a woman, and a brave one, and we will fight the battle together."

Two months later a letter came from Barbadene, but not from Leslie. Dr.

Barbadene had passed time. Leslie Drysdale called for Mrs. Morton. Mary Morton was in her lodgings in Edinburgh University, in her hand, and her face radiant. "Why! In the first place was she not Mrs. Mary Morton? Yes, her labors had had their reward, and now she was qualified to do her best in alleviating the sufferings of her fellow mortals. The joy of joys of Leslie's success had been too great for her to restrain.

"I am Mrs. Morton. Will you take a seat, Mr. Drysdale?" she said.

"Scarcely worth while," with a sharp laugh. "I don't believe in circumstances, Mrs. Morton, and as no doubt you will be wondering what the object of my visit, I shall come to the point at once. I understand that there was a secret and mutual engagement between you and my brother Leslie, and—"

Mary Morton rises from her chair. She looks flushed and her eyes kindled as she replied with the dignity of a queen. "Sir, I am your brother's promised wife."

"Sir! The secret pleasure of having you as a sister-in-law," she answered. "Calm yourself, you must know all. Lillian was engaged to the son of a wealthy Scotch landlord; they were to be married in autumn. Leslie is dying of typhus contracted in some foreign port. His business is dying also. Leslie cannot come home, John in partnership, nor marry a wealthy woman, not a poor."

"You need not trouble troubling your existence, sir. In plain English, you want me to give him up. I should say, 'No,' he said, clutching a very lifelike hand her steady gaze.

"Will he be long now, Mrs. Bingham?"

"It is Mrs. Drysdale who speaks, but I am her friend and confidante (for Mrs. Morton has fallen into deep sleep, and she was married to him); she is the one who I trust to get to him; and early in spring they left their native land, and went to America."

"Leslie, she has written to me," she said.

"Leslie, she has

THE ELKHORN ADVOCATE

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1894

LOCAL NEWS.

Read the new Advt. of J. Ellerington, tin-smith.

Mr. D. C. Carneship of Fleming was in town yesterday.

Mr. Cameron, of Oak Lake, was in town on Monday.

Don't forget the A. & U. W. meeting at Wednesday at 8 p.m.

We are pleased to see Mr. Hugh Stewart around again after his recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Struthers are visiting their daughter, Mrs. H. M. Coombes this week.

Mrs. E. Bradford went to Brandon Hospital on Saturday morning last to see her husband.

Mr. John Freeman is confined to the house with broken rib caused by falling from a hay loft a short time ago.

The young people's societies of Elkhorn held a union meeting in the town hall to-morrow night, (Friday), at 7.30 p.m.

A number of old settlers, about 40 families, it is said, are now on their way from France, and will settle in the Dauphin district.

It is reported that "Hambler" got snowed under in Monday's blizzard, but we hope another good stiff breeze will blow him in in time for next issue.

Mr. A. M. Bradford visited his brother at the Brandon Hospital this week, and reports that the doctors attending him have no hope of his recovery.

A terrible explosion occurred at Marquette on Saturday last, and the new grist mill is a total wreck. The boiler exploded, killing the engineer, Mr. John Reid. No one else was injured.

The Winnipeg Saturday night, in its issue of Feb. 13, gives a good account of the Elkhorn curling club since its organization. Also the pictures of president Travis and sec-treas. Cushing.

Mr. "Doc" Shelton returned to Elkhorn on Sunday evening from Bat Portage, and purposes spending a couple of weeks in town. He has a specimen of gold quartz from the pits near Bat Portage, and reports the mining prospects of that district to be exceptionally bright.

Rev. Geo. Daniels, of Brandon, will preach in the Methodist Church here on Sunday, March 11th. On the Monday evening following he will deliver a lecture on "Brain and Muscle" under the auspices of the N. L. of G. E. After the lecture a lunch will be provided by the ladies.

A newspaper man, says an exchange, claims to have made a discovery that no man was ever bitten by a mad dog who had paid for his local paper a year in advance. We haven't the statistic at hand to verify the truth of this assertion, but nevertheless we believe the thing is worth trying. No man with a subscription receipt in his pocket was ever struck by lightning or carried off by a cyclone or struck by a railway train. Try it.

Three rinks belonging to the Two Creeks Curling Club, played a friendly game with the Elkhorn boys on Tuesday afternoon and evening. It was scarcely to be expected that they would beat the Elkhorn boys, considering the fact that their rink is in the open air and six miles away from them, and also because they had not the advantage of good curling stones, having been accustomed to play with wooden curling stones. Considering these disadvantages they put up a decent game.

The regular meeting of the Elkhorn temperature society was held in the Foreigner's hall on Tuesday evening last. A constitution was adopted, followed by a debate on "Woman's Suffrage." Mr. R. S. Mowat took the affirmative and Mr. G. Broadbent the negative. The decision was left to the audience which consisted chiefly of married men and ladies, who gave their decision in favor of "Woman's Suffrage." Possibly on the principle of the clown at the circus that "the men have suffered long enough."

Rev. Dr. Sparkling, Principal of Wesley College, Winnipeg, preached an eloquent sermon in the Methodist church on Sunday evening last. The object of his visit was to solicit subscriptions for the Methodist Sustentation Fund, and the educational fund. In explanation of the former fund the Rev. Dr. related a very amusing story. In replying to the objection that a fourth college was unnecessary he replied that St. Boniface, Catholic College, was not, altogether a suitable institution to train Methodist students, while St. John's College, belonging to the Anglican Church was not the place where Methodist doctrine and discipline could be taught. The experiments of sending the Methodist students to Manitoba College, (Fresly written) had been tried with the result that several of them were now ordained Presbyterian ministers so that Methodist wished to have their own work done in their own way they must do it themselves and pay for it themselves.

The Court of Revision will be held on April 7th in the town hall Elkhorn. Service will be held in St. Mark's Church this evening at 7.30. Choir practice immediately after.

Wallace Council met at Warden, on Tuesday last, report of the meeting will appear next week.

Mr. Alex. Frazer has been appointed Librarian Inspector and Controller for the Municipality of Wallace, and Mr. S. Wood, Secy.

The Winnipeg Free press published a supplement on Thursday last containing a write-up of the principal works of Manitoba. A very artistic production.

At Wallace Council meeting on Tuesday, it was moved by Freeman, seconded by Turnbull, and carried, that a grant of $100 be given to the Brandon Hospital.

The boys are doing a lot of talk these days about horses. We would advise them to wait until this blizzard passes by before getting out their sticks.

The annual meeting of the Liberal Conservative Association of Western Assiniboin will be held at Fleming next Saturday afternoon, Feb. 24th, at 8 o'clock.

The general stock of Rogers & Douglas, of Elkhorn, amounting to $2500 of goods, and $1300 of store fixtures, will be offered for sale by auction at Wimpey Feb. 22nd.—Commercial.

Mr. Frazer, a lawyer from Toronto, arrived in town on Friday evening last. His purpose entering on the practice of his profession in Elkhorn shortly. We wish him every success.

The Winnipeg Commercial published this week, a very handsome supplementary number. The Commercial is in its twelfth year of publication, and is a journal which ought to be in the hands of every business man.

A number of Elkhornites gathered at the station on Saturday evening last to welcome the curlers back from Winnipeg, and amidst cheering and the rattle of tin cans, Mr. Frank Thomas presented them with a large "white owl." The platform was crowded with friends and well-wishers who had all the week looked forward to the players returning with the Wilkerville, International or Tuckett trophy. Although our curlers didn't bring home any of the above, they made a creditable showing, and are to be congratulated.

We regret to learn that the Parish and Home published under the auspices of St. Mark's Church, Elkhorn, will soon publication. The Feb. number contains the following explanation: "As yet we have not received a sufficient number of subscribers to warrant us carrying on this paper. We purpose discontinuing its publication for some time. However, as a good number have written, very encouraging notes about it, and have expressed a desire to see it continued, we have decided to launch it forth again as soon as we receive enough subscribers to ensure expenses."

Fully two dozen letters of inquiry from settlers in the States who are coming to Western Canada in the spring reach the Canadian Pacific Railway land department at Winnipeg, each day. They are from all parts of Michigan, Nebraska, Washington, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and the two Dakotas. Most of the inquiries are regarding freight rates for settlers' effects and passenger rates for families. They represent a good class of farmers, with stock and effects, and appear to be kind of settlers at present needed in the Northwest.

"I am satisfied," said Mr. Griffin, the assistant commissioner, "from the inquiries we have received that the immigration this spring from the States to Canada will be the largest in our history."—Columbian.

In the recent election for M. L. A. in the Whitewood constituency, Mr. Joe Clementson of Broadview, was elected. We clip the following amusing incident which occurred in the election from the Free Press. Under the new law, if a man makes a mark, call it a system of balloting, introduced in the Territories no names appear on the ballot papers. The papers are blank. Each candidate has a color allowed him at the nomination. Pencils of corresponding colors are provided. Thus in the present instance, a man who wished to vote for Clementson made his cross with a green pencil; Potter used a black one; Sulmers blue; and Clement red. When the pencils arrived at Fairmont polling station, there were two blue pencils and no green.

This necessitated a man and team being sent through the day before polling to a pretty bad blizzard to Fairmont, his sole cargo being a lead pencil. This train will cost the Territories about $20.

Burnbank and Two Creeks

We are having some very cold rough weather these days.

We are glad to report that Mrs. A. McLeod, Boeckh, has recovered from her severe illness, and is able to be out again.

Patterson & McLeod have lost that very valuable Clydesdale horse, Larkum Dody, at Glen Burn, due to Jean McCrae.

Mr. Geo. Col. has lost his favorite dog, Tawser.

Mr. H. M. Power went east on Monday's train.

Mr. Allison went to DeClarke to attend a Council meeting last Friday, but did not

WASHAKADA INDIAN HOMES.

INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENTS.

Carpenter Shop

Buggies,
Buckboards,
Cutters,
Waggons,
Carts,

Made to order
and Repaired:

Window Frames
Door Frames, etc.

Made to order.

All kinds of Repairing of

Furniture

Done on the shortest notice.

Orders promptly attended to.
Satisfaction Guaranteed

John Simington,
FOREMAN.

JOS. WILLIAMSON,
CONTRACTOR AND BUILDER.

Estimates given on all kinds of

Buildings,
STONE BRICK, CONCRETE and FRAME.

All Kinds of

PLASTERING

Promptly Done.

CEMENT WORK
a Specialty

LOOK HERE!

Come to the new tin shop for all kinds of tinware at Rock Bottom prices.

We know it is hard times, that is the reason our prices are down, it is getting near spring and you will want to have troughs on your house and we are in a position to do it right.

Eggs taken in exchange for tin ware. Call and see me at the new tinshop just west of W. Dickson.

Hot air furnace a specialty.

Estimates given on all kinds of hot air furnaces either in town or country.

J. Ellerington.

return till Saturday on account of the storm.

Foxes and wolves are very plentiful around here this winter. There must be some good baits lying around.

When is Jimmie going to fetch his pig home?

Ray. Sam Jones is lecturing in Minnesota.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 16.—The city is infested with vagrants and lawless elements from the States. To-day, in broad daylight, Roland McDonald was beat up at the point of a revolver in the heart of the city and the robbers got clear away. Some of the citizens are applying for the privilege of carrying firearms.

Boot & Shoe Shop

Boots and Shoes
Made to order
AND

Repairs Neatly
Done.

Strictly First-Class Work.
Prices Moderate.

(Cripple Boots a Specialty)

As the above work is done by

First-Class
Workmen

We guarantee you entire satisfaction in all the Latest Styles.

Before purchasing elsewhere send for price list and directions how to measure your own foot, and we will be happy to furnish you with full particulars.

N. B. We keep samples of Standard Boots always on hand. Quantities of ten pairs a big reduction. Send for particulars.

J. R. Duke,
FOREMAN.

HARDWARE MOTTO FOR 1894

Cheap
Goods,

Terms Cash

Tinsmithing promptly and neatly done.

10 Per cent
off all Sales

Except Building Material.

American coal Oil

Jos. Broadley.

MARKETS

Wheat $0.42 to 0.50

Flour—Hungarian 0.00 1.60

Strong Bakers 0.01 1.50

Bread Roll 0.01 0.10

Mutton carcass 0.07 0.10

Pork carcass 0.05 0.50

Butter 0.00 0.20

Eggs 0.01 0.25

Hay per ton 3.00 5.00

Chickens per Dozen 0.00 0.00

Tailor Shop

Tailoring

done in all its branches.

Gentlemen's

Suits

MADE TO ORDER.

Over 500 Pieces

To Choose from.

Clothes

REPAIRED,

CLEANED AND

PRESSED.

Parties bringing their own material can have same made up to order.

John Preston,

FOREMAN.

W. J. Thompson,

FOREMAN.

Bill Heads,

Letter Heads

Note Heads,

Lien Notes,

Statement Forms

Business Cards,

Funeral Cards,

Wedding Cards,

At Reasonable prices.

Bill Heads,

Letter Heads

Note Heads,

Lien Notes,

Statement Forms

Business Cards,

Funeral Cards,

Wedding Cards,

At Reasonable prices.

Bill Heads,

Letter Heads

Note Heads,

Lien Notes,

Statement Forms

Business Cards,

Funeral Cards,

Wedding Cards,

At Reasonable prices.

Bill Heads,

Letter Heads

Note Heads,

Lien Notes,

Statement Forms

Business Cards,

Funeral Cards,

Wedding Cards,

At Reasonable prices.

Bill Heads,

Letter Heads

Note Heads,

Lien Notes,

Statement Forms

Business Cards,